

Nneka Jones

A proud Chicago native, Nneka is a Posse Foundation Scholar at Agnes Scott College in Decatur, GA studying political science and business management. On campus, Nneka serves as a Student Associate Member of the Board of Trustees, a Residential Assistant, and the Public Relations Chair of Agnes Scott's chapter of IGNITE, motivating young women who are ready and eager to become the next generation of political leaders.

Nneka has a passion for political and social empowerment as evidenced by her public speaking platform and work on the Jon Ossoff for U.S. Senate campaign, the Georgia State Capitol House of Representatives, Atlanta City Council, and the Chicago City Council. Through these experiences, she has been able to leave a lasting impact on the cities of Atlanta and Chicago through contributing research to the Smoke Free Atlanta ordinance which went into effect on January 2, 2020 and directing the first ever voter registration drive in her Chicago neighborhood reaching over 400 community members during the height of the COVID-19 pandemic. Outside of her political ambitions, Nneka serves her community as a mentor to young women between the ages of 14 to 18 years old by providing one-on-one mentorship with a goal of helping them increase self-confidence.

With these experiences, Nneka looks forward to pursuing a JD and fighting for social justice and educational equality to fulfill her life's mission of including those who have been excluded and hearing those who feel they no longer have a voice.
